

Lawyer Spotlight: Meghan E. Hall

By RIW on September 14, 2023

Meghan E. Hall recently joined the firm as an associate in the Litigation Department.

Meghan represents individuals and corporate clients on a wide range of litigation matters, including land use, real estate, complex commercial and employment disputes. She guides clients through all stages of the litigation process from pre-litigation counseling to jury and bench trials, arbitrations, mediations and appeals.

Prior to joining RIW, Meghan handled cases at all stages of the litigation process at a boutique firm in Boston. She is a graduate of Assumption College (now Assumption University) and Suffolk University Law School. During law school, she was a legal intern for the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office.

Why did you become a lawyer?

Ever since I was about 5 years old, I knew that I wanted to be a lawyer and that has never wavered, though the reasoning went from thinking that might be a cool job to understanding that being lawyer meant that I would be able to advocate for those that needed help.

Why did you join RIW?

When I was considering joining RIW, I was looking to grow my practice and elevate my career to the next level. RIW checked all the boxes for me; it is a firm of personable, relatable and hardworking people in a collegial, collaborative and supportive work environment aimed at providing clients the best advice and results possible.

Tell us about your practice.

I have grown my practice in the area of real estate, where I have litigated disputes ranging from large scale construction cases, to land use matters, to purchase and sale disputes. I developed a special interest in property law while in law school and was able to translate that into my career handling a wide variety of complex real estate disputes. At RIW, I will continue to handle real estate, land use and construction disputes, as well as complex commercial and employment disputes.

What do you enjoy most about being a litigator?

Litigation

No day is ever the same – to be a litigator is to be dynamic, each day presents something new and different from office days drafting briefs to hearings in court, or days where you think you will be drafting a brief and end up in court, it always keeps you on your toes.
