

Get to Know Attorney Connor Lewis

By RIW on September 8, 2025

Connor Lewis has rejoined the firm as an Associate in the Banking, Finance & Lending Department. He previously served as a summer intern and later as a law clerk, and we're excited to welcome him back to the team.

Why did you become a lawyer?

I was able to see my grandfather work for many years as a successful attorney, which helped shape my interest in the profession.

Tell us about your career path.

When I started college at St. John's University (NY), I had a passion for sports and wanted to become a sports agent. I went to Suffolk University Law School with the full intention of trying to become a sports agent until I started my internship with RIW during the summer of 2024. Working as a summer intern for RIW made me realize I had a true passion for Banking and that I could have a great career in the field. I continued to work for RIW in the Banking Department during my last year of law school, which led to my becoming an Associate in the Banking Department.

Tell us about your practice.

My practice is in the Banking Department, and my work entails being involved in every aspect of a loan transaction, ranging from drafting documents to preparing for the closing. In addition, I am actively involved in drafting and managing foreclosure proceedings related to bankruptcy matters.

What do you love most about your work?

I enjoy the opportunity to network and engage with a diverse range of professionals. Building meaningful connections is a key aspect of the banking industry, and I find great value in creating relationships that support professional growth.

Why did you choose the firm?

I chose RIW because of the firm's exceptional professionalism and the genuine kindness of its staff. The team at RIW is remarkably approachable and consistently willing to provide support whenever needed.

Tell us a fun or surprising fact about you.
