Software

APPROACH

Ruberto, Israel & Weiner's Technology Business Group understands the unique concerns and challenges of the software business. We are extremely knowledgeable on a diverse range of software development and distribution issues and speak the language of our software business clients.

We have worked with software companies at various stages of development, from startups and emerging growth companies to established corporate players and publicly traded companies. We also represent the entities that invest in them. Our software clients include regional, national, and international companies developing security software, financial software, embedded systems, Internet software, and vertical market applications.

Our firm's broad range of practices, including banking and finance, mergers and acquisitions, securities, litigation, corporate business and intellectual property, enables our software team to offer clients a comprehensive and sophisticated suite of legal services. From regulatory compliance to protecting and enforcing intellectual property rights to executing an Initial Public Offering, we are equipped to handle all legal matters for software companies. We also provide counsel on the legal aspects of business activities such as distribution and branding.

Our software practice offers services in the following areas:

- Corporate business
- Industry and securities compliance
- Employment law
- Financial services
- Intellectual property
- Litigation
- Mergers and acquisitions
- Real estate
- Taxation
